2. Invite 4-8 guests using the ingredient list to request items to be brought to the party. (The host may select to purchase all of the ingredients or request that the guests bring various items) Invitations may be addressed if desired.
3. Set up the table displaying the board, cards, and dice prior to the arrival of your guests. Review the cards and instructions at this time. The host may get as creative as he/she desires (music, signs, decoration).
4. Have the required cooking equipment readily available in the kitchen prior to beginning the game. You will want to make the transition from each round to the kitchen as smooth and quick as possible to avoid delay in the game. (Try setting up “stations”) in the kitchen for the players to identify their equipment)
5. Have the Round 1, Round 2, and Round 3 finish line (instruction cards) readily available to hand out after each round, Review them prior to the game so that you will know what will be required of each player or team after the round.
6. Because this game is a re-fill to the original game menu, remember to print out your finish line cards from the computer and cut apart for the finish line positions.
7. When your guests arrive, provide them with a beverage because they will need the beverage when toasting n Round 1.
8. Provide an overview of the game and cards to all participants prior to starting play. Remember that when a player crosses the finish line and selects a category, they must correctly answer a Convivium question. If the answer is incorrect they must move back to their previous position.
9. Have each player roll the dice to determine who will start the game and begin play in a clockwise order.
10. Enjoy the game remembering the goal of Convivium is to foster a fun, interactive, dinner party that combines competition with good and humor. Transition between each round is key.
